

This bears out the confession of the mother, Mrs. Mary Brackwell, that she killed her children by administering morphine.

A SCENE FROM OTIS SKINNER, "The Merry Jugglers Before the Village Inn," at The Kentucky Tomorrow Night. Seats Now on Sale.

Theatrical Notes

In naming his new play for this season, "The Harvester," in which he is to be seen at The Kentucky tomorrow night, Otis Skinner was confronted by a peculiar problem and the result itself would seem to be a title which scarcely suggests the exact and peculiar nature of the piece itself and his own strikingly novel role of its gypsy hero. The French name for the play, which was written by that picturesque French playwright, Jean Richepin, and which is recognized in France as his masterpiece, is "Le Chemineau." The literal translation of this would be "The Roadster." To travel the highways is, in the French language, to "cheminer." The hero of this Richepin drama of fields and highways is a gypsy-spirited young fellow, debonair and happy-go-lucky whose heart is ever beat on roaming hither and thither without a thought of the morrow—a true son of the Roman people and yet not a gypsy of the camp type. What lifts him above the mere gipsy of the "Romany Rye" style, already so familiar to the footlights in London-made melodrama by George Sims and others, is that he is no mere wandering vagabond but is symbolically in his poetic and romantic features, of the wander-spirit that exists more or less in everybody's nature and dreams. In the play he stands forth as a truly romantic figure, thus suiting the temperamental and art of that graceful and buoyant interpreter of poetic and romantic roles, Mr. Skinner. Mr. Skinner himself, is said to be thoroughly wrapped up in this latest footlight creation of his, and, to judge from all the praise which he has received, and he has scored one of the artistic hits of the season, the role of this gipsy harvester must fit him ideally and be the best role of his career.

The "Girl and Bandit" Co. left this morning at 7:50 o'clock for Madisonville, where it plays tonight. The company was provided with a special car on train No. 122, and the company was so large that the car could not accommodate all and part of the members went into the regular day coach and some of the men into the smoker.

Toddle McCann, a tenor chorus singer, who is with the company, is well known here, having sung in the chorus in the Houston leads, the comic opera company which played at Wallace park two summers ago, when the Casino was opened.

Comic operas have come, pleased and gone, but nothing ever made a more pleasant impression on Paducah theatre-goers than "The Girl and the Bandit" at The Kentucky theatre last night. It is very seldom that such a combination of talent, good voices, and other requisites of good comic opera is found on the stage these days but the Perley Opera company certainly is there with the goods. A large and critical audience was on hand last night and there was one continuous round of applause from the time the curtain went up. The stars—everyone fine—were all over-worked. The people could not get enough, and time after time they had to respond to encores. There are several fine voices, picturesque costumes, a well trained chorus, fun and frolic, and pretty music. Mable Hite became a prime favorite at once as Quersa. She is attractive and clever and will never be forgotten by Paducah theatre-goers. It was thought by many that she was here with "The Chaperoones," but she was not. Eva Tanguay succeeded Miss Hite in the cast just before The Chaperoones reached Paducah, and the name was not changed in the program, leaving many to think they saw Miss Hite in the Chaperoones when it was Miss Tanguay.

Miss Viola Gillette is a prima donna of beauty, grace and ability, and had to respond to great many encores. Walter Jones is remembered here as the star in the "Sleepy King" last season. Joseph Miron has a splendid bass voice and is a good comedian, and other principals were equally as good. Nearly everyone who heard "The Girl and the Bandit" was satisfied that it is the best of his kind ever heard here.

If "A man is known by the company he keeps," why shouldn't a theatrical manager be similarly gauged? The company of fun provokers that Broadhurst & Currie have secured, and which have played all of the large cities, to make their famous musical farce successful, is still intact, and will be seen in its entirety at The Kentucky on Tuesday night, with, of course, added musical numbers and specialties. There are no bad seasons for good shows. The clean, clear-cut farce with bright, sparkling dialogue, grotesquely comic situations and excellent acting of character and straight parts is always bound to have its public and in the roster of such shows, "Rudolph & Adolph" has a large-sized niche to itself. It has a laugh every minute, and has delighted crowded audiences during three seasons. This will be given for the benefit of Treasurer T. W. Roberts and Stage Manager W. C. Malone, of the Kentucky theatre.

Died in Arkansas.

A telegram announces the death of Mrs. Edna Parish, of Rector, Ark., a niece of Elder J. N. Hill, and a daughter of John E. Hart, who once lived in Paducah. Edna Parish was the special chum and playmate of Mrs. Beulah Ayres, when they were girls together. Mrs. Parish died this morning of appendicitis, after an illness of about one week. She was an excellent lady, the wife of Dr. W. O. Parish, and has lived in Rector, Ark. about four years.—Fulton Commercial.

PITTSBURG CLUB ARRIVED TODAY

The Celebrated Aggregation to Play Here Four Days.

Most of the Noted Players Are in Barney Dreyfus' Aggregation of Stars.

SOME OTHER BASEBALL NEWS.

The Pittsburg National ball club, one of the strongest aggregations of baseball players in the country, arrived in Paducah this morning at 7:45 o'clock from Hot Springs, Ark., in a private sleeper, "Hamlet," and will this afternoon at Wallace park meet the Paducah club in the first of a series of four exhibition, practice games.

Mr. Barney Dreyfus, the millionaire owner of the team, is here with the Pirates and was met at the train by a special street car chartered to take the team to the Palmer house.

At the hotel Mr. Dreyfus registered his entire team as follows: Wm. Clancy, C. C. Rotchey, Thos. W. Leach, John Wagner, C. C. Benumont, Otis Clymer, Fred C. Clark, Fred C. Hillebrand, Charles Philippe, P. J. Flaherty, C. H. Power, Al G. Pratt, Geo. F. McIlriddle, Geo. E. Howard, Al Wagner, H. J. Peltz, Samuel Leever, M. J. Lynch, Charles Case, Clyde Goodwin, A. Robitaille, V. A. Lindaman, C. Holmes, H. V. Arkie.

Mr. Dreyfus has arranged with the street car company to run a special car to and from the ball park to accommodate his team. He is carrying over two teams, working out a lot of "youngsters," but most of the men who played here last season in an exhibition game are with the team. Leach, Wagner, Benumont, Clark, Leever, Lynch and Case, were with him but many of the others are new ones. Clyde Goodwin, who pitched for Vincennes last season, is with the team and has done good work.

The team will remain in Paducah today, Friday, Saturday and will play a Sunday game. This is one of the most celebrated baseball aggregations in the country and will no doubt attract the biggest crowds of the season. Last year when the Pirates played Paducah at the close of the season, the grandstand was packed to overflowing and the crowd could hardly be kept off the field.

Mr. Dreyfus is a former Paducahan, and is a cousin of the Messrs. Wellie, of Paducah.

Toledo has come and gone. In the last game of the preliminary or practice season yesterday afternoon, Paducah defeated the visitors by a score of 13 to 1. Wilder, who pitched for Cairo last season, got his and was touched for twelve hits. Paducah made the only double play. The score by innings was:

Score by Innings.
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Toledo 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 7
Paducah 1 0 0 2 1 4 5 x—13 12 1
Batteries—South and Land, for Paducah; Wilder and Clark, for Toledo; umpire, Platt.

Prof. Wm. Deal is getting out a vest-pocket schedule of K. I. T. games, which he will give away to the fans here.

Here's a mixed aggregation for you. The Princeton Tribune in speaking of the Kilty league team says: The make-up of the Princeton team is undoubtedly varied when it comes to the occupation of the men other than that of playing ball. The battery is real sweet, as Becker and Wilkinson are candy-makers. If music is needed at the funeral of Paducah and Cairo, it will be furnished by Vergils and Jeffries, as they are professional singers, while Walters, who is a newspaper man, can be depended on to write a nice obituary for Henderson, Vincennes and Hopkinsville.

Swain and Phares are teaching school, while Lyons and Taylor are glass-blowers. Among the others are Weissmann, who is a locksmith, and Kirkham, who is a hotel clerk.

Mr. Dreyfus will send seventeen of his men to Indianapolis tonight. He did not intend to keep them all here, but will make two different circuits with the teams.

To Live in Paducah.

Mrs. Lucy Foster and family left for Paducah Monday where they will make their home in the future. Mrs. Foster will conduct a private boarding house, John will go on the road for a coffee house the 1st of May.—Murray Ledger.

INNOCENT MAN

HAY GET A PARDON AFTER BEING CONVICTED.

Claimed He Was Involuntarily Sold—Mule He Paducah He Didn't Know Was Stolen.

Attorney W. C. Fox, of Mayfield, was here today en route to Bardwell where he goes to circulate a petition in behalf of W. C. Burkett, a convicted mule thief, says yesterday's Fulton Leader. It seems that Burkett was convicted for another man's crime. One night several months ago two men named Hayden and Elrod went to Burkett's home to spend the night. Mr. Burkett, while in conversation with his guests, made known to them his intention of starting to Paducah the next day with several fine mules. Hayden and Elrod told Mr. Burkett they had a good mule for sale and that if he would sell the animal for them he might have all over $75 the mule brought. Mr. Burkett agreed to the proposition and accordingly sold the mule in Paducah for $90. He gave $75 to Hayden and Elrod and they disappeared. Soon after this Burkett was arrested upon a charge of mule stealing. All the evidence was against him and after a hard legal fight Burkett was given two years in the penitentiary.

Since his incarceration Hayden and Elrod have been arrested and convicted on the same charge, the former getting 18 months and the latter three years in the penitentiary. These men now exonerate Burkett from any guilty knowledge or participation in the crime. Attorney Fox hopes to secure a parole for the unfortunate man, if unable to secure a full pardon.

MAGNOLIA BLOSSOM

IS ITS GREATEST

POPULARITY

Has been attained because of its exceedingly low price and its unquestionable power to cure when all others fail.

MAGNOLIA BLOSSOM

Is a boon to womankind. Why? Because it is a common sense home treatment, so simple in its nature that it enables every woman to treat herself without medical aid, and effects prompt, thorough and permanent cures with less trouble and expense than anything else in the world.

There is a constant increase among women of womb and ovarian troubles; the rapid age in which we live, household duties and the many cares of life, cause women to become careless and these evils creep upon them unawares.

Passing through the great hospitals of our large cities, one is surprised at the large number of patients lying upon those snowy beds; women and girls who are awaiting or recovering from serious operations which could all have been avoided if the trouble had been arrested in time; if symptoms and indications of an unhealthy condition of the womb or ovaries are not heeded the penalty must be paid in time.

Bearing down pains, backache, nervous exhaustion, leucorrhoea, irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, all are symptoms that herald more serious troubles that are sure to follow if relief is not sought at once.

IF YOU DRINK, WHAT AND HOW? LISTEN TO THE SAGES OF THE BAR.

(From the New York Morning Telegraph.)

Oh, the hottest drink is coldest, And the coldest piping hot; The shortest is the longest, And the drink that is, is not.

For drink is a mocker.

As the wise gazaboo said— The only thing that's certain

Is the cold gray dawn—and head.

If you want something to warm you up in these bleak February days, look not upon the Tom and Jerry when it sheds its steam in the shaving mug.

Pass up the hot Scotch. Cut out the ginger stew.

Kat teleles—or take your liquor straight.

The head of the laboratory department of the Hotel York says so, and years of observation have qualified him to speak as an expert. As the steam heat is to the fly-room flat, so is the mixed potation to the human frame. A delusion and a snare.

It doesn't make good.

"I don't wish any notoriety," declared the chemist, when asked what was doing in the way of new styles this season, "but you can say this: The man who guzzles mixed drinks at any season of the year is a kump, and if that walking delegate of the liver, old cirrhosis calls around and announces a strike it is his own fault. This applies to winter drinks as well as summer, but more particularly to winter.

"There may be some artificial heat in brandy, whisky, or even beer, but there is certainly none a few minutes after it has been swallowed in hot water, none at any time in syrup or sugar or whipped eggs. In the summer colds drinks add to the animal heat of the body; in the winter hot drinks are a first aid to Arctic air. Odd, isn't it?"

The Real Mental Healer.

But there was stout Joe Willett And his cronies of the town. Who differed from the House of York As they gulped hot punches down. If death lurks in hot toddies It must be sweet to die;

With a banal song upon the lips, A love-light in the eye.

When doctors disagree, who will dose the patient?

Tommy Lane has heard as many hard luck stories, perhaps, as any other cafe impresario in the world, and he is confident the mixed drink has its mission, even if it does mislead. He bases his opinion upon a study of human nature.

"What you must strive after in this business," said Tommy, oracularly, "is solidarity with the customer. He is the primary force that keeps the cash register busy. The barkeep's arm is only a cog in the machinery.

"Give him not what he needs, but what he thinks he needs. Ever hear of a man that drank whisky because it pleased his palate? No, of course not. It stimulates his backbone.

That's what he wants with it at all times and if he thinks it warms up his system depend upon it that it will. We bartenders are the original mental scientists, and, in spite of certain prejudices against us, we do more 'healing' than any other class of persons. Our cure for poverty, for instance is simple, cheap and effective. Why, I've had men come in and hang me up for their first drink, ring in on another, borrow a quarter, buy, and go out with a scheme framed up to build a railroad.

"Yes, there are a few fashions from time to time. One of the latest is fabricated according to this formula: Equal parts of Irish or Scotch and Jersey applejack, a dash of rum, lump of sugar, lemon peel, and of course, hot water. If that doesn't warm up, the patient will think he is warmed up; and, as I have said, what the patient thinks is the desideratum in this business."

Have you heard of the applejack today?

A twin of the thundercloud's light, That strengthens the mind and the body.

An elusive but lovable spirit?

"Hot drinks injurious?" remarked a chemist who begged that his name be withheld, at least until after Christmas (his position is a point of vantage at Christmas time). "How, then, do you account for the fact that the undertaker's wagon is not standing at all times in front of the Manhattan Club? Say, did you ever notice that each club has its favorite tipple? This is a curious fact that I have never yet heard explained. Now the Manhattan affects applejack toddies. Hot? Well, rather. Why, I've—that is, a friend of mine has seen the time he was uneasy lest the pipes burst from overwork.

"And where does the applejack come from? Jersey. What do the Jersey farmers do in the long winter evening after they have sat on fences and got theirs in a case against law-breakers from New York? Don't they brew applejack toddies and go to bed soundly regularly between election day and the vernal equinox?

And did you ever hear of a Jersey farmer dying? They quit living sometimes, but it's because they've used up all the oxygen—and applejack—coming to 'em.

"No, I can't believe that hot drinks kill, unless it's in the case of a devotee who wants one and has gone shy on the price."

DON'TS FOR SPEAKERS AND WRITERS

BY EDWARD H. WARMAN, A. M., Author of "Practical Orthodoxy and Critique," "The Voice: How to Train It; How to Care For It," etc.

Don't say "bad cough."

Example: "He has a very bad cough," should be "He has a severe cough."

Note: No one has a good cough.

Don't say "badly" for "bad."

Example: "I'm feeling badly, today," should be "I'm feeling bad," or "I'm not feeling well," or "I'm not well," or "I'm ill."

Note: It were better to use some other word in the place of bad, yet of the two evils choose the lesser.

Don't say "balance" for "remainder."

Example: "The balance of the day was stormy," should be "The remainder of the day was stormy."

Note: One may correctly say "balance my account," or "What is the balance of my account?"

Don't say "banister" for "baluster."

Example: "He leaned over the banister," should be "He leaned over the baluster."

Don't say "barely escaped with their lives."

Example: "Seventeen out of the forty that were inmates, barely escaped with their lives," should be "Seventeen out of the forty that were inmates, barely escaped."

Note: If they escaped (barely, or not) they must have escaped with their lives.

Don't say "beautifully" for "beautiful."

Example: "She looks beautifully," should be "She looks beautiful."

Don't say "beg" for "beg leave."

Example: "I beg to inform you," should be "I beg leave to inform you."

Don't say "began" for "began."

Example: "They began promptly," should be "They began promptly."

Don't say "behave" for "be good."

Example: "I shall expect you to behave," should be "I shall expect you to be good."

Note: To ask or to command one to behave is indefinite, as one may behave well or otherwise. A child promises a teacher to behave during the teacher's absence. No matter how bad the child has been, he can truthfully say to his teacher: "I behaved all the time you were gone."

Don't say "better of the two."

Example: "Which apple is the better of the two?" should be "Which apple is the better?"

Note: The use of the word better implies comparison, therefore "of the two" is superfluous.

Don't say "between" for "among."

Example: "The light was between seven of them," should be "The light was among seven of them."

Note: Do not use the word between when the number exceeds two.

Don't say "bit" for "any."

Example: "Will you not take a bit less?" should be "Will you not take any less?"

Note: I heard a man in California ask an expressionist if he would not take a bit less than the amount charged. The man addressed, unaccustomed to the Yankeeism, became indignant; a bit to him was twelve and one-half cents.

Don't say "blamed it on" for "blamed."

Example: "He blamed it on the conductor," should be "He blamed (accused) the conductor."

Don't say "blow" for "blow."

Example: "He blew the bugle when in the army," should be "He blew the bugle when in the army," or "He was a bugler when in the army."

Don't say "both alike" for "alike."

Example: "They were both alike," should be "They were alike."

Don't say "both recalled" for "recalled."

Example: "The two boys both recalled having met," should be "The two boys recalled having met."

Don't say "bound" for "determined."

Example: "He was bound to interfere," should be "He was determined to interfere."

Don't say "bravery" for "courage."

Example: "He is a brave man," should be "He is a courageous man."

Note: Don't say so unless you really mean bravery. The words are not synonymous. A man may be brave by nature (as bravery is in-born) but courage comes by cultivation. A brave man is often a reckless man, a courageous man is generally a cautious one.

Don't say "brick-bat" for "brick."

Note: A brick-bat is a piece of brick.

Don't say "bison" for "bison."

Note: In North America, bison; in India, buffalo.

Don't say "bug" for "insect."

Note: All insects are not bugs; all bugs are not insects.

Don't say "burst" for "burst."

Example: "The boiler burst," should be "The boiler burst."

Note: There is no word bursted; hence, it should not be used in any sense.

Don't say "but that" for "that."

Example: "I do not doubt but that he did it," should be "I do not doubt that he did it."

Don't say "but" for "if."

Example: "I do not know but he is gone," should be "I do not know if he is gone."

Don't say "but" for "than."

Example: "No other reason but this is given," should be "No other reason than this was given."

Don't say "by" for "when."

Example: "The finder will be rewarded by leaving the same at this office," should be "The finder will be rewarded when leaving the same at this office."

Note: His reward does not consist in the act of leaving it, except the reward may come to him through his conscience.

Don't say "calculates" for "intends" or "purposes."

Example: "He calculates going to college," should be "He intends, or purposes, going to college."

Note: He may have to calculate in regard to the expenses.

Don't say "can" for "may."

Example: "Can I close my school earlier tomorrow in order to get there in time?" should be "May I close my school earlier tomorrow in order to get there in time?"

Note: The superintendent kindly criticized his teacher by saying: "You can and you may."

Don't say "can't complain."

Example: "I can't complain," should be "I have no reason to complain," or "I cannot reasonably complain."

Don't say "can't live in here."

Example: "The woman can't live in here," should be "The woman, in here, can't live."

Note: The foregoing was spoken of one already in the house; in fact, too ill to leave it.

Don't say "capacity" for "ability."

Note: One may have the capacity, but be lacking in ability. Capacity is the receiving, ability the application. Capacity is passive; ability is active. The millionaire said of his daughter (when told that she did not have the capacity to enter a certain college): "Why, I'll buy her the capacity."

You Can Feel Better at Once!

When everything seems an effort, when you feel tired most of the time, when you wake up every morning as tired as when you went to bed,—then there is something wrong. Nature is protesting against some neglect or some abuse.

Nature protests more often against nerve neglect than any other cause.

Remember, your strength is not in your muscles—the muscles simply work when the Nerve Force tells them to.

Even your brain does not work by itself—the substance in your brain cells must have energy to do its work; this energy must be nerve force—the same great power-of-life that controls every organ of the body.

Every form of weakness, or sickness, or disease, comes from a lack of Nerve Force to keep the organs working properly.

When one speaks of "a good constitution," one simply means a strong, healthy nerve system.

When the nerve system is not strong and well-nourished, it follows inevitably that one is easily "over-worked"—easily run down—just as Mrs. Lowry describes.

"For several months my system had been run down and I felt all worn out, tired, did not feel able to get out of bed in the morning and felt just as tired when I got up as when I retired. Had no appetite and looked pale and listless. A friend who had used Paine's Celery Compound a couple of years ago, and who recommended it very highly, induced me to try it. I felt better at once and I found that at the end of six weeks it had changed me into a well woman, and I cannot say too much in its praise. I shall take a bottle every Spring and Fall and feel sure that it is all the medicine I shall need. Very truly yours,—Mrs. Ina M. Lowry, 3109 Dunham Ave., Kansas City, Mo. (Worthy Matron Order of Eastern Star; Rec. Sec. Kansas City Friendly Aid Society.)

Paine's Celery Compound is giving new Nerve Force to thousands every day by feeding and restoring the nerves to their full strength. It never fails to build up the run down system to full, ruddy health.

Two days' treatment proves its marvelous power. You feel better at once.

Try Paine's Celery Compound to-day. Take just one dose when you go to face the hard part of the day's trials.

See how much better you feel.

See how much more easily the trials roll away.

Paine's Celery Compound feeds the nerves—restores them to their strength—gives them new power to send vitality and health to every part of your body, new courage to your heart, new animation to your brain.

Remember this—Paine's Celery Compound is the prescription of one of the most famous physicians this country has ever known, Prof. E. E. Phelps, of Dartmouth University.

All reputable druggists recommend and sell Paine's Celery Compound.

SAW THE SIGHTS

BULL FROM WOOLLY REGIONS OF TENNESSEE WAS HERE.

Spied a Red Dress and From Then On There Were Dolms.

Speaking of bulls, there was one among a herd of cattle that drew into the levee about noon yesterday. This particular bull was not of the kind you see in the newspapers, for he seemed to have a conscience, even with liberty staring him in the face. He said that when the gate swung open and all he had to do was to step ashore, he hesitated, much as a society lady does when she wrinkles up her brows in the perplexity of trying to decide which dress to wear to a party.

But the bull's conscientious scruples soon became no larger than the figure that comes before, and he blithely stepped ashore, sniffed the wholesome atmosphere from Paducah's busy mart and the market and "Hell's Half Acre," and then he strolled up Court street, to the terror and scandal of pedestrians, for it must be remembered he was a husky bull—even as husky as the politician's voice declaiming office—and there was a vicious glint in his eye that would make John L. Sullivan's wicked glare look like faded flowers.

At the corner of Fourth street the noble bovine encountered a blonde young damsel with tawny hair and emerald dress. The latter seemed to take his fancy, for he stopped, looked and snorted. So did the girl, but her snort was more like that of pork chops when alive and she turned the color a darkey isn't—white.

By this time a crowd of men gathered, and then came three negroes from the boat, with a rope, prepared to do the cowboy act. The bull, however, was a wise bull, and scenting ignominy and capture, he started in to do the town, proceeding east, on Fourth street, making vicious lunges at dogs and snorting at the people on the sidewalks, who were dodging in a manner to make even the shifty Cornett jealous. Unlike Micawber, they didn't wait for things to turn up, but promptly leaped fences and put distance between themselves and the bull, which finally took refuge in James A. Glauber's livery barn, at 301 Fourth street, where he rushed around wildly. The terrified squeals of the horses could be heard for a block. And then there was the harmonious cadence from the respiratory organs of a pig that the bull had stooped with all fours, breaking a hind leg and seriously deranging his digestive functions.

The event now assumed the proportions of a Spanish bull fight. The negroes leaped into the enclosure with the bull and succeeded in getting the rope over his horns. Then the gate was opened, and the gall those negroes who held the rope struck was faster than some women's tongues. Their hats sailed skyward, and you could have played poker on their coat tails.

That bull was certainly a mean one—as mean as the man who crossed his bees with lightning bugs, so they would work nights, but the bull got the worst end of it finally, even as the man did with the bees, and you know what that is when speaking of bees. Enough negroes got on the rope to subdue him and he was dragged back to the levee.

No one was hurt but the pig.

Daily Thought.

"Regard yourself as a worker with the Creator of the universe."

The Weather.

Generally fair tonight and Friday. Frost, heavy in the exposed sections, tonight, warmer Friday.

ENCOURAGE THE WORK.

The city and county could not better encourage work in the interest of the community than by giving the Commercial club the money it asks to assist it in carrying on its work. The club has the advancement of the county's interests as well as those of the city at heart, and intends to help every part of the county as much as possible, city and country alike.

The people of Paducah pay about eight-tenths of the county taxes and are interested in seeing the county prosper. If fiscal court had appropriated $1,200 a year for the Commercial club, about $1,000 of it would have been paid by the people of Paducah leaving only about $200 of it to be paid by the residents of the county outside of Paducah.

It is to be hoped that the Commercial club will not this soon after it has started its good work, get a black eye at the hands of both city and county. Both city and county should help it, even if both have to strain a point to do it.

Speaking of street improvements, the Owensboro Inquirer says: "The supreme court of the United States has decided that owners of property must pay the expense of street improvement under the Kentucky law. Backed by the opinion of some of the best lawyers in the country, the Inquirer five years ago took this stand, but the council was afraid and went into the street improvement business at the expense of the city. The result is that the improvement will now go on by slow stages instead of rapidly and continuously. If the property owners had been required to pay for the improvement they could have been given long time, and the city could have expended from $20,000 to $40,000 annually for the making of good streets, and their benefits could by this time have been extended to parts of the city which need them, but which will not get them for a number of years."

The taxpayers will want to know, and have a right to know, why the county should pay a man to disburse the money wrongfully collected by the sheriff of McCracken county as taxes. So far as known the sheriff did not object to paying back every cent of the money, and if he is willing why can't he be allowed to do it, without the county's paying out good money that belongs to the taxpayers for doing something the sheriff should do for nothing, or himself pay to have done? The affair looks very much as if it is imposing an unnecessary expense on the taxpayers.

The grand jury now in session will be asked to investigate the cigarette question in Paducah, and it is to be hoped will do it. According to information already filed with the members, cigarette material is sold in large quantities every day to very small boys, which is against the law. This is especially true in Mechanicsburg. It is averred by reputable men of that locality. Many boys hardly large enough to walk, go about rolling their cigarettes and smoking as boldly as their fathers or elder brothers, if reports are true, and the grand jury will find plenty to accomplish in the way of applying the law to those who sell them the material. The law is very strict against the practice. Enforce it.

It is hard to tell which is the greatest nuisance in Paducah the nomadic hot tamal man or the Town Cow. Sometime ago the city council passed an ordinance that a tamal man could not have a stand in Paducah unless it was in some sort of a building. The result is that the tamal men have wagons, and instead of infesting one locality, most of them now wander all over the city at night, and where they formerly annoyed only a few people, they now annoy whole sections. Evidently the city license ordinance needs another amendment.

BOAT DAMAGED

WOOLFOLK REPORTED DAMAGE IN MISSISSIPPI RIVER BY A GALE.

Her Wheel Torn Off and Logs For the Palmers-Ferguson Co. Were Lost.

Captain Ed. Woolfolk has gone down to Cairo to look after one of his boats, the Woolfolk, which got into trouble about 150 miles south of Cairo on the Mississippi river. It seems the steamer with two barges of logs for the Ferguson-Palmer mills, of Paducah, was caught in a gale and the barge broken loose. The boat's wheel, it is understood, was torn off and the craft rendered helpless.

Some of the logs were lost but the loss will be light. The steamer Sycamore and steamer Mary Michael have been sent out from Cairo to assist the disabled boat to that city, where she will be repaired. At last reports they had not returned with the Woolfolk.

MR. J. C. UTTERBACK ELECTED TREASURER

For McCracken County by Fiscal Court Today.

The County Declines to Act on the Request of the Commercial Club for An Appropriation.

COURT ADJOURNS TODAY

Mr. James C. Utterback, of the City National bank, was elected treasurer and receiver of the county sinking fund this morning by fiscal court, the election being the result of competitive bids.

Tuesday the magistrates decided to elect by the best bid and no bid system. This morning at 10:45 o'clock the bids were opened, and ran as follows:

James C. Utterback, City National bank, four and a quarter cents interest on sinking fund deposits; five cents on all other money deposited by the county, and an agreement to loan the county money at the rate of 5 per cent interest.

Mr. H. H. Loving, Globe Bank and Trust Co., three and a quarter on sinking fund; four and a quarter on all other money and to loan the county money at the market rate of interest, not to exceed 6 per cent.

Mr. Ed Atkins, American-German National bank, four and three-sixteenths on sinking fund; three per cent interest on other money; to loan at 5 per cent interest.

Mr. Utterback's bid was decided the highest for interest and the lowest for loan, and the office went to him.

In regard to appropriating $1,500 to the Commercial club, the board took no action, thinking it best to reduce the tax levy.

"We thought that the best way to advertise the county and make it more advantageous to the residents would be to reduce the tax levy," one member of fiscal court stated this morning. "We really have not the right to appropriate any money to the club and rather than get into any complications we decided not to take any action at all."

County Judge Lightfoot was authorized to borrow $10,000 for the bridge fund whenever needed, and in whatever sums he deems best.

The board transferred $100 from the county levy to the road and bridge fund. This was caused by a mistake made last year when the levy for one fund was 17 cents and the clerk got it on his books at 16. This threw too much to the county levy and took away from the road and bridge fund.

The account of Poor Farm Keeper Robert Wilkins was allowed. It amounted to $792, but $400 had been advanced him at a special meeting a few weeks ago.

A settlement with back tax collector, T. W. Luttrell, was made. He settled for $139, his commission of 10 per cent, being $55.

The commission of back tax collector for 1905 was fixed at 45 per cent, instead of 40, as last year. Mr. T. W. Luttrell remains the back tax collector.

At 11 o'clock court was adjourned until this afternoon at 2 o'clock when the orders of the term will be read, approved and court finally adjourned.

IN THE COURTS

Circuit Court.

R. H. Craig, for nuisance, was fined $50 and costs.

Vic Hallowe, charged with renting a house to a board, filed a demurrer to the indictment which was sustained. The commonwealth took an appeal.

A verdict for the defendant was filed in the case against Ida Chesterfield, for running a disorderly house. The charge against the United Underwriters Co., for acting as a foreign company without a license, was dismissed.

Mrs. Kate Harvey and W. H. Parham were dismissed of the charge of running boarding houses or hotels without a license.

L. A. Lagomarsino was fined $15 and costs in an appeal case from police court for violating the Sabbath.

Jeff Elrod was fined $25 and costs for gaming.

A verdict for the defendant was filed in the appeal case against Arch Wilson from the police court.

Will Hamilton was yesterday afternoon given one year in the penitentiary for shooting at Special Officer Halley, of the I. C. Hamilton belonged to a tough gang in Mechanicsburg, and some months ago is alleged to have been in a crowd that held up Constable A. C. Shelton near Island creek bridge. The officer was relieved of $17 and some papers and Hamilton was spied in the railroad yards by Special Officer Halley, but refused to submit to arrest and shot at the officer, who returned the fire. Chief of Police Collins a short time afterwards learned that Hamilton had been hit and was in the hospital at Evansville, and he was arrested and brought back to Paducah.

Bony Robinson was fined $25 and costs for gaming.

The house breaking charge against Rigger Hale, colored, was dismissed, there being no witnesses against him.

Mary Moody, who with Neli Banks, colored, was charged with stealing a grip from Mr. and Mrs. John Sloenn, of Chicago, while they were en route to the city from the depot in a cab, received a one-year verdict this morning. She was harboring Banks and admitted the grip was hers but told several different tales about it. The evidence was strong against her, showing that the two had been working together in the theft.

Ulterior Judge W. M. Reed concluded the last case on today's docket; this morning at 11 o'clock and adjourned court until two this afternoon when he began hearing motions.

Fines Set Aside.

Attorneys Hendrick & Miller of the city, have been informed that the fines assessed against the Standard Oil company at Marion, Ky., for peddling without a license, amounting to about $1,000, will be set aside. Through a misunderstanding the Paducah attorneys were not on hand when the cases were called and the fines were assessed by default.

Sues on Note.

L. D. Husbands has filed suit on a note for $108 against Fannie Eubanks, the paper being dated Feb. 9, 1904.

Bootlegger Held.

Dave Landrum, colored, was arrested at Murray, Ky., yesterday afternoon by Deputy U. S. Marshal G. W. Saunders and brought to Paducah, where he was tried before U. S. Commissioner W. A. Gardner and held to answer in the sum of $300 for alleged bootlegging.

Police Court.

Four colored defendants faced Judge Sanders in police court this morning. Frank James, colored, could not help having trouble with Mollie Baker and was fined $5 and costs and recognized in the sum of $200 for his good behavior towards her for a period of one year. Joe Long and Jesse Hill, colored, were arraigned for a breach of the peace. The warrant was filed away against the former and dismissed as to the latter. Ham Friday, colored, who threatened to cut off Bertie Baker's head, was fined $1 and costs and recognized in the sum of $200 for his good behavior towards the woman.

Grand Jury Reports Again.

The grand jury made its second report today, returning five more indictments.

They were against Allie Norton, colored, for malicious cutting; Polly Hicks, colored, for malicious cutting; Will Holden, colored, false swearing; Will King, colored, false swearing; Herman Melton and Louis Hanners, grand larceny.

County Court.

W. S. Massey deeds to H. C. Allison, for $2,100 property in the county.

Almeda Arnold and others deed to W. T. Faegen, for $500, property in Mechanicsburg.

Laurel Jackson, aged 28, and Lena Skilton, aged 21, of the city, colored, have been licensed to wed. It will make the first marriage of both.

Is Deputy Jailor.

Mr. A. Hrabie has been made deputy county jailor during the criminal term of circuit court. Jailor Jones found that he would have to secure a deputy because of the fact that some one has to be in the courtroom to guard the defendants when tried, and without a deputy he would have to lock up on leaving the jail.

Civil Circuit Court.

In the case of P. H. Stewart, administrator, against John H. Holston, a judgment for sale was filed.

L. D. Husbands has filed a suit in circuit court against Mrs. Fannie Eubanks and W. Mike Oliver for $108.

This afternoon the magistrates are having a conference with Sheriff Lee D. Potter relative to the excessive tax collections and the means of paying them back to the tax payers. Sheriff Potter says that he intends paying every cent back that was found to have been over-collected.

The Sheriff Undecided.

Sheriff Lee Potter stated this morning that there was some question in his mind as to the legality or right of fiscal court to authorize any one to pay out money collected in excess of the legal tax, as shown in the report by Inspector H. H. Himes. Sheriff Potter stated that he intended paying the money back himself and would state definitely in a day or two what he intends to do.

Hired Young Doctor to Act as a Cabman.

(Baltimore Telegram to the Philadelphia North American.)

Dr. L. E. Wilson, a young physician, with sufficient funds to set up a stable and handsome establishment, was awakened one stormy night last week by a man, who declared the doctor's professional services were wanted at a house three miles out in the country.

Just before the doctor called up the stable for his horse the visitor asked what the charge would be. "Three dollars," was the reply. The stranger was satisfied, and soon the two were driving through the storm.

When the house containing the supposed patient was reached the man alighted first, and handing the doctor $3, remarked: "You needn't come in, doctor; you see, it is this way:

"No hackman would drive me out for less than $6, and it occurred to me that your horse might need exercise."

COLOR OF THE WRAPPER HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH GRADE OF CIGARS

"It would seem that after all these years the average smoker was pretty well educated on cigars," said the clerk at a prominent cigar stand yesterday. "But such is far from the fact. The ignorance of the men who have smoked from six to ten cigars a day for twenty years is something colossal and it has even reached the stage where their lack of knowledge hinders the business. To remedy this, a prominent tobacco paper has begun a campaign of education and is urging cigar clerks to inform their customers."

"The trouble comes chiefly from the fact that not one man in a hundred knows that the color of the wrapper has nothing to do with the strength of the cigar. A man comes into a cigar store and calls for a mild cigar. If the clerk shows him one in a dark wrapper, he pushes it away and says it is not mild enough whereas it may be much milder than the one he eventually buys in a light colored wrapper. Every cigar manufacturer knows that the strength of the cigar depends almost wholly on the filler. A light filler in a dark wrapper has just as mild a taste as if the wrapper were light, and a dark filler in a light wrapper is just as strong as if it was sold to a customer wrapped in an almost black Havana."

"The clerk, however, has a difficult position when he undertakes to educate his customer. As a rule these men who actually know the least think they know the most and resent any effort to give them information. I tried it on one old customer two weeks ago and he has never been back. One of the best illustrations I ever saw of the ignorance of the average smoker was a joke played by several men on a friend who pretended to know everything about cigars. The conspirators took me into the secret and asked me to sell them a five-cent brand when they called for a twenty-five cent article, and a few moments later they came up with the victim."

"Jim, I found the best cigar I have ever smoked here yesterday," said conspirator No. 1. "It is the most delightful smoke I ever had. Thick, mild and with a delicate aroma. It is worth every cent of the twenty-five cents they ask. Show us some," he added turning to me.

"I pulled five or six of the five-centers out of a box, carefully concealing the label, and each man took one and lighted up. The men in the joke declared it was a wonder and the victim, smoking carefully and blowing the smoke out slowly with the air of a connoisseur, finally said:

"Ashville with its splendid hotels open the year 'round, is encircled by magnificent ranges of mountains and is a favorite stop-over point for thousands of tourists annually. Other noted resorts in the 'Land of the Sky' and 'Sapphire Country' are Hot Springs, Flat Rock, Tryon, Fire-vend, Toxaway, Waynesville, etc."

"The 'Florida Limited,' leaving Cincinnati 8:30 a. m., connecting at Lexington with morning train from Louisville arriving Jacksonville early next morning runs every day in the year. The 'Chicago and Florida Limited,' leaving Cincinnati in the evening connecting at Lexington with evening train from Louisville, will go into service early in January, 1905. Both of these trains run through solid to Jacksonville with Dining Car service en route."

BISHOP WOODCOCK

At Grace Episcopal Church Tonight—First Visit Here—Will Administer Confirmation Rites.

The Right Reverend Charles E. Woodcock, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Western Kentucky, will arrive from Louisville this afternoon, and tonight will preach at Grace Episcopal church, and will administer the rites of confirmation to a class after the sermon.

Bishop Woodcock was recently elected to fill the place of the late Bishop T. P. Dudley, and was rector of St. John's church, Detroit, Mich., at the time. He is a man of scholarly attainments, and of great eloquence and will doubtless be greeted by a large congregation tonight. He has already won a distinguished place in Louisville which has been his home since January, but this is his first visit to Paducah and much interest is felt in his coming.

He will be the guest of Rev. and Mrs. David C. Wright, at the rectory on Kentucky avenue.

THE QUESTION OF BRUSHES

In our store amounts to this: "the better the bristles, the higher the price." The handle of a brush doesn't matter so much, for, if it is substantial and well-finished it fills all requirements.

BUT HOW ABOUT THE BRISTLES?

We have the biggest stock of brushes in Paducah, all selected with an eye to the quality of the bristles.

Our Dollar Hair Brush

For general family use is the greatest friend-maker in our store.

MANY APPLICANTS HAVE WRITTEN HERE

To Obtain Positions in the Public Schools of Paducah.

Letters Received From Maine to Wyoming—Compendious Over Miscellaneous School.

LOWEST BIDDER A TRUSTEE

Supt. C. M. Leach, of the public schools, is daily receiving dozens of applications for positions in the Paducah schools as principals.

He has received letters from Maine to Wyoming and as far south as Alabama and thinks the Paducah schools must be pretty well known by this time. The election of principals was not announced until a little more than a week ago, yet the superintendent already has a drawer full of applications.

The committee will meet this week or Monday and look over the applications, recommending the best for positions. The board will then act Tuesday night on the recommendation of the committee.

The board will also on Tuesday night take up the matter of awarding the contract for the building of the Mechanicsburg school.

From the present indications there is likely to be a tangle in the school board in awarding the contract for the building of this school.

The lowest bid was made by the firm of Chamblin, Murray, Davis and Dunlap and as Mr. Davis is a member of the school board and the charter prohibits any member accepting a contract for school work, the committee has not awarded the contract.

It is said that this rule will not hold good because the bid was placed by the firm and not Trustee T. Davis in person.

Members of the committee do not seem to think a trustee can be interested even indirectly in a contract for the city, and one stated this morning that the committee was simply waiting on Mr. Davis to see what he would do. If the board decides a trustee cannot take a contract of this kind, Trustee Davis will either have to resign his position to accept the job, or give up the job to hold his position.

A JOLLY BUNCH

MANY HALL PLAYERS IN TOWN GETTING READY FOR SEASON

Mr. Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Pittsburgh team, has 21 men, Manager Mickey Flinn has 18 in the Toledo team, and there are 15 here for the Paducah K. L. T. team.

Some of the Pittsburgh bunch are old hands, and draw salaries that have five figures. Fred Clarke, manager of the Pittsburgh team, has more than once drawn a $10,000 yearly salary.

Hans Wagner, who had the fans guessing the first of the season, is with Pittsburgh, although it was reported he would not play with the Pirates this season. It is understood he will play first base. He is registered "John" instead of "Honus" Wagner this time. He will be in that part of the club sent to Indianapolis this evening by Mr. Dreyfus. He plays any position except pitcher.

DUE TODAY

SUPT. RENSHAW WILL ARRIVE TO INSPECT SHOP.

Division Officials Arrived in Paducah Today on Brief Trips.

Mr. William Renshaw, superintendent of machinery of the I. C. road, and assistants will arrive in Paducah sometime today to inspect the local mechanical department.

The shops have been greatly improved in many ways in the past year and the company intends to make more improvements this spring and this is the important mission of the officials are on, to see just what is needed.

It is said that the local shops have attained such excellence in all branches of work that the greatest portion of the work of the central portion of the system is done here. Engines are repaired from all parts of the system and the Paducah shops are second to those in Chicago.

Supt. A. H. Egan, of the Louisville division of the I. C., and Roadmaster F. L. Thompson arrived in the city last night on a special car with Traveling Chief Dispatcher Page. The officials came down to look over the Paducah terminals and Mr. Egan left for the division this morning. Mr. Page went on through to Chicago.

Called to Vicksburg, Miss.

Mr. W. T. Dinneen, special agent for the Louisville division of the I. C., is in the city today, having accompanied his wife as far as Paducah on her journey to Vicksburg, Miss. Mrs. Dinneen was called to Vicksburg by the illness of her brother, Attorney E. G. Goldsmith, who is precariously ill at that city.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. JOHN D. SHERMAN.

A Chicago Woman Who Is an Expert on Parliamentary Law.

Mrs. John D. Sherman of Chicago, recording secretary of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and one of the most prominent club women in the Illinois state federation, also holds the position of instructor of parliamentary law in the John Marshall Law school. Before assuming this position Mrs. Sherman had been lecturing to the women of the school on parliamentary law, but now she is instructor to the more advanced classes of men students, a position heretofore filled by men of national reputation.

Mrs. Sherman began the study of parliamentary law about ten years ago.

MRS. JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

Five years ago she became instructor to small classes organized in some of the leading women's clubs of the city.

Mrs. Sherman is also the official parliamentary of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. In addition to her class work, Mrs. Sherman conducts a parliamentary law department in the American Monthly Magazine, the official organ of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and she is the author of a book on parliamentary law which is now in its fourth edition.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Youthfulness.

Youthfulness is a quality very difficult to describe. As often as not it proceeds from the mind rather than from appearance, and one often feels that middle aged and elderly people that they are in reality far more youthful in ideas, in the keenness of their enjoyment and in their fresh outlook than many of one's acquaintances who in point of years are mere girls.

It is said that every age has its compensations, and undoubtedly there are many mothers of families and grandmothers, too, who own to an enjoyment and zest for life equal to those experienced in early years. Youthfulness is temperance and the capacity for taking the simple goods that are to be found in existence rather than in waiting for superlative joys which may never arrive.

says Woman's Life. The bored person of either sex is invariably a wearisome companion, while one with a keen sense of enjoyment adds to the well being of others a thousandfold.

Daughters and Home.

Mothers who love their daughters supremely cannot afford that any place should seem pleasanter to them than the home nest. A mother should not be so interested and insistent on keeping the home in apple pie order as to frown upon the free and hospitable welcome within it to her children's friends. She should open wide the doors of heart and home. It costs little to have boys and girls come to the house for informal frolics, to practice songs together, to play games, to talk over plans and pleasures.

A mother should make it natural for her daughters' friends to come because the welcome is so warm, the meeting place so cheerful, the atmosphere so friendly and unpretentious, as to make self-consciousness impossible. In this way mothers will get to know their daughters' friends and make it unlikely that any unfortunate attachment should grow and ripen without her knowledge until too late to uproot it.

The Girl Who Works.

God bless the girl who works! She is brave and true and noble. She is not too proud to earn her own living or ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She smiles at you from behind the desk or counter or printer's case. There is a memory of her served up in the silent gown. She is like a brave mountaineer already far up the precipice—climbing, struggling, rejoicing.

The sight should be an inspiration to us all. It is an honor to know this girl and be worthy of her esteem. Lift your hat to her, young man, as she passes by. Her hand may be stained by dishwashing, sweeping, factory grease or printer's ink, but it is an honest hand and a helping hand. It stays misfortune from home; it supports an invalid loved one maybe; it is a loving, potent shield that protects many a family from the alms-house. All honor to the brave toiler! God bless and protect the girl who works!—Chicago Chronicle.

Her Uneventful Lot.

Under heaven there is no other creature so forlorn as the woman of education and refined tastes who marries a really poor man and who must combine in her own person mother, wife, cook, seamstress, laundress and nurse. In comparison the lot of the so-called working woman is idyllic ease and luxury.

try, for she at least has some hour out of the twenty-four that she can call her own and some money, however little, that she can spend on herself, whereas the unpaid household slave has none. The romantic goose of a girl who is willing and anxious to marry on nothing a year dreams of spending her life in a rose covered cottage, where she will long perpetually adore her adoring spouse, and it is only when it is too late that she realizes that, translated into actualities, the vine embowered cot is a 2 by 4 flat and that it is her unhappy destiny to fry Cupid to death over the kitchen range.—Chicago Tribune.

Woman's Wisdom.

Women are the inheritors of the oldest, most universal human wisdom. They have more sense than men, for the simple reason that a man has to be a specialist, and a specialist has to be a fanatic. The normal man all over the world is a hunter or a fisher or a banker or a man of letters or some silly thing. If so, he has to be a wise hunter or a wise banker. But nobody with the smallest knowledge of professional life would ever expect him to be a wise man. But his wife has to be a wise woman. She has to have an eye on everything.—G. K. Chesterton in London Daily News.

Nerves and a Milk Diet.

An entire milk diet is an excellent thing for the woman who is troubled with insomnia. It is also good for the one who is so nervous that when she does sleep she has the sensation of falling and wakes with a terrific start. When these conditions exist it is well to subsist on milk alone for some time. A grown woman should take a pint of milk as a meal, but to keep up her strength she should take four meals a day instead of the usual three. People with weakened nerves require a larger quantity of water than those whose nerves and brains are strong.

Carried Over.

Cut into three two cupfuls of cold roast beef, veal, lamb, mutton or chicken. In a frying pan melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, and fry in it a sliced onion. Take out the onion and stir into the butter two tablespoonfuls of browned flour mixed with a tablespoonful of East India curry powder. When well blended, pour in a pint of stock and stir to a smooth brown sauce. Now add the cold meat, which should have been seasoned with salt and pepper. Toss and stir until heated through. Serve with boiled rice. It should be accompanied by bananas.

A Graceful Hand.

The most graceful carriage of the hand is with the second and third fingers held slightly together. To acquire this carriage practice the following exercise: Holding the second and third fingers together, curve them and the thumb in toward the palm of the hand until a perfect circle is formed, then open slowly until the fingers and thumb are again straight. Practice the exercise until the fingers naturally assume the above carriage when the hand is in repose.

Be Careful When Making a Home.

Most of us are careful when we make our wills. We should be far more careful where we make our homes. To the sensitive man or woman place means very much. It affects the health of the body. It considerably transforms the mind, changing greatly the outlook on life. It even plays tricks with that very delicate piece of mechanism, the heart.—Robert Hichens.

Ginger Jars.

The person who would throw away the ginger jar after the ginger has been eaten has no appreciation of beauty. The jars are excellent for flowers and, being low, are especially adapted to table use. In pictures of Japanese arrangements of flowers jars of this shape are frequently seen, and no one will deny that the surface is as interesting as many expensive potteries.

What Women Are Learning.

The gift of commanding friendship is undoubtedly of far greater worth than beauty; but, like beauty, it can be to some extent cultivated. This is a fact not generally recognized. But then a few years ago women allowed themselves to age prematurely because they did not know of certain ways to keep themselves young both in appearance and manner.—Lady's Pictorial.

Economy in Table Linens.

When tablecloths are beginning to wear out in the folds cut two or three inches off one end and one side and rehem them. This process will change the places of the folds and will add new life to the cloth. Serviettes and towels should be treated in the same way.—Household.

Plump Arms.

Physical culture will produce round, well shaped arms. One set of exercises alone should not be used; this will develop only one or more muscles at the expense of the rest of the arm. Have the exercises arranged so every muscle is brought into use.

When cleaning wall paper use dough made of four mixed with a little soda and water. The soda will not injure the paper, and the work will be done more rapidly with it.

The vinegar cruet should be put into a closed closet after each meal. Light renders vinegar tasteless and takes away its snap.

Cotton rings are best for bathrooms. Have them of white and a color to match the floor paper.

When walking breathe deeply, carrying the chest elevated and expanded.

THE SECRET SERVICE

HOW THE STATE SPIES OF EUROPE DO THEIR WORK.

Military Secrets Often Revealed by Local Papers in Watchful Government Agents—Russia and France Partial to Female Spies.

When people read or hear of a secret service agent in the world and the one most generally relied upon by the nations is the editor of the local paper.

Let us call the town Greenbush and assume that the government has decided to build a hidden battery close by. The editor of the Greenbush Gazette will announce in his columns that Inspector or Captain So-and-so has arrived at the local hotel to superintend some work for the government.

Next week readers will be invited for bricks, cement and shingles. The foreign intelligence man, reading this news in a Paris, Berlin or St. Petersburg, begins to chuckle. "This is going to be interesting."

A few months pass, while foreign eyes daily scan the paper for news of the battery. At last the editor gravely informs his readers that "new guns for the battery now building have arrived."

"Ah," says the intelligence man, "our agent in London must have a look at that!" And accordingly one day a pleasant foreigner arrives at Greenbush, starts painting the cliffs, chats in the evening with the local toppers at the bar and is a good listener when yarns about the new battery are told. Finally he departs and sends his report to his chief, who hands it on to his expert branch for close investigation.

As regards the spies of the secret intelligence service, it is interesting to know that the supply largely exceeds the demand. For any one who has not been in the service himself it seems incredible what numbers of secondhands, young and old, are to be found in most armies and navies who will willingly sell their country's secrets to the highest bidder.

These and a few specially appointed agents are the main retailers of military secrets. There are, further, the deserters, who, arriving in a strange country, generally without money, turn the knowledge they have acquired during their time of service into money by selling their country's secrets.

On this account of course prices are not so high as is generally believed. For example, a government would rarely pay "several thousand pounds" for the purchase of a signal book. Was not the secret of the French field guns sold in 1818 to Germany for 5,000 francs (200), and such a secret has a hundredfold the value of a signal book.

Altogether the life of the secret service man is not devoid of interest. He gets hardened to the business, and if it were not for the exciting fact that where other people deal in goods he deals in the lives of nations it would soon pass.

Of course on the first occasions when you have been sent to a foreign country and carry papers in your pocket which if found on you would obtain for you twenty years' hard labor free of charge, it is difficult to keep perfectly at ease when talking to a high police officer or military official.

In the end, however, you get used to it and careless till you are caught.

The main agents of Russia and France are ladies, while Germany prefers men. So does Britain.

The triumph of the French policy of employing female spies was celebrated in Italy when a well known lady of the French embassy managed to get the Italian minister into her toils. It was at the time Italy intended to occupy Tunis and to establish a protectorate there. The Italian fleet was preparing at Palermo.

In only two more days it would sail, and Tunis would belong to Italy, when during one of the lovers' meetings the Italian minister let the secret out. The rest belongs to history. France arrived first and occupied Tunis.

Here is another fact which may appear hardly credible, but is absolutely true: At the beginning of the South African war I had to consult with the intelligence department of a large German gun firm, and for fun the chief of the department showed me the record of the armaments of the Boers. Well, this record was true to the last line, while the report of the British intelligence department contained not even a list of guns sold to the Boers by British firms previous to the war.

Great Britain has an excellent but small secret service. We pay less perhaps than any other power, but no important subject is left uncovered. We spend perhaps 15 against 50 by our continental neighbors, but much of our intelligence costs nothing, being accepted from honorary sources. For this reason it is frequently valuable.

In the South African war many mistakes were made through inaccurate news and the employment of people who would go to any length to justify their employment for the time being.

The compilation of facts is fairly easy in British possessions. Foreign officers can always secure admission to factories and dockyards, and the openness of their treatment is not equalled in any other country.—London Express.

GRIEVED TO DEATH

BECAUSE OF THE LOSS OF HIS FEET IN RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Jim Hubbard Died Yesterday Evening From Injury and Despondency Resulting From Loss of Limbs.

James Hubbard, known among his friends and associates as "Red," died at 6:30 o'clock last night at his home 923 South Eleventh street from complications arising from the accident three weeks ago today which cost him his legs.

It is thought the young man's grief at the loss of his feet had as much to do with causing his death as the injury itself. He was a switchman in the employ of the N. C. & St. L. railway, and while engaged in switching cars in the local yard he fell from a car and both feet were so mangled that his legs had to be amputated.

He improved for several days, but the loss of his feet seemed to prey on his mind to such an extent that frequently it would make him delirious. As soon as he would become conscious he would begin again to mourn the loss of his feet and throw himself into another delirium, until finally a few days ago his life was despaired of.

The deceased was about 28 years old and was born at Glasgow Junction, Ky., but had lived in Paducah for a number of years. He was always genial and popular and his death will be generally regretted by his associates and friends.

He leaves a wife and a sister and brother here.

CHAPTER IX.

THE sailor went after those monkeys in a mood of relentless severity. Thus far the regular denizens of Rainbow Island had dwelt together in peace and mutual good will, but each diminutive won-won must be taught not to pull any strings he found tied promiscuously to trees or stakes. As a preliminary essay Jenks resolved to try force combined with artifice. Failing complete success, he would endeavor to kill every monkey in the place, though he had in full measure the inherent dislike of Anglo-Indians to the slaying of the tree people.

This, then, is what he did: After tilting a biscuit tin with good sized pebbles he dinned a Dyak bat, layse and bell, rubbed earth over his face and hands and proceeded to peck the won-wons mercilessly. For more than an hour he made their lives miserable until at the mere sight of him they fled, shrieking and gurgling like a thousand water bottles. Finally he constructed several Dyak scarecrows and erected one to guard each of his alarm guns. The device was thoroughly effective. Thenceforth, when some adventurous monkey, swinging with hands or tail among the tree-tops in the morning search for appetizing nut or luscious plantain, saw one of those fearsome loggins, he raised such a hubbub that all his companions scrambled hastily from the canopies of the wood to the inner fastnesses.

During each of the two daily examinations of the horizon, which he never omitted, Jenks minutely scrutinized the sea between Rainbow Island and the distant group. It was perhaps a needless precaution. The Dyaks would come at night. With a favorable wind they need not set sail until dusk, and their dark sampans would easily cover the intervening forty miles in five hours.

He could not be positive that they were a real inhabitants of the islands to the south. The China sea swarms with wandering pirates, and the tribe whose animosity he had earned might be equally noxious to some peaceful fishing community on the coast. Again and again he debated the advisability of constructing a scow-like raft and endeavoring to make the passage. But this would be risking all on a frightful uncertainty, and the accidental discovery of the eagle's nest had given him new hope. Here he could make a determined and prolonged stand, and in the end help must come. So he dismissed the navigation project and devoted himself wholly to the perfecting of the natural fortress in the rock.

That night they finished the rope ladder. Indeed Jenks was determined not to retire to rest until it was placed. He did not care to try a second time to carry Iris to that elevated perch.

One of the first things he contemplated was the destruction if possible of the point on the opposite cliff which commanded the ledge. This, however, was utterly impracticable with the appliances at his command. The top of the rock sloped slightly toward the west, and nothing short of dynamite or regular quarrying operations would render it untenable by hostile marksmen.

During the day his rides at ninety yards' range might be trusted to keep the place clear of intruders. But at night—that was the difficulty. He partially solved it by fixing two rests on the ledge to support a rifle in exact line with the center of the enemy's supposed position, and as a variant on the outer rest he marked lines which corresponded with other sections of the entire front available to the foe.

Even then he was not satisfied. When time permitted, he made many experiments with ropes reeved through the pulley and attached to a rifle action. He might have succeeded in his aim object had not his thoughts taken a new line. His aim was to achieve some method of opening and closing the breech block by means of two ropes. The difficulty was to secure the preliminary and final lateral movement of the lever bolt, but it suddenly occurred to him that if he could manage to convey the impression that Iris and he had left the island the Dyaks would go away after a fruitless search. The existence of ropes along the face of the rock was essential to his mechanical scheme would betray their whereabouts or at any rate excite dangerous curiosity. So he reluctantly abandoned his original design, though not wholly, as will be seen in due course.

In pursuance of his latest idea he resolutely removed from the foot of the cliff all traces of the clearance effected on the ledge, and, although he provided supports for the tarpaulin covering, he did not adjust it. Iris and he might be seen there for days with out their rest being found out. This development suggested the necessity of hiding their surplus stores and ammunition, and what spot could be more suitable than the cave?

So Jenks began to dig once more in the interior, laboring manfully with pick and shovel in the locality of the fault with its vein of antimony.

A pure yet passionate love for a woman beautiful alike in body and mind. And now it was to enfold him with riches that might stir the pulse of even a South African magnate, for the sailor, unmindful of purpose other than providing the requisite cache, shoveling and delving with the energy peculiar to all his actions, suddenly struck a deep vein of almost virgin gold.

To facilitate the disposal at a distance of the disturbed debris he threw each shovelful on to a canvas sheet, which he subsequently dragged among the trees in order to dislodge its contents. After doing this four times he noticed certain metallic specks in the fifth load which recalled the presence of the antimony. But the appearance of the sixth cargo was so remarkable when brought out into the sunlight that it invited closer inspection. Though his knowledge of geology was slight, he was forced to believe that the specimens he handled so dubiously contained neither copper nor iron pyrites, but glittering yellow gold. Their weight, the distribution of the metal through quartz in a transition state between an oxide and a telluride, compelled recognition.

Somewhat excited, yet half skeptical, he returned to the excavation, and scooped out yet another collection. This time there could be no mistake. Nature's own alchemy had fashioned a veritable nugget. There were small lumps in the ore which would only need alloy at the mint before they could be issued as sovereigns, so free from dross were they.

Iris had gone to Venus' bath and would be absent for some time. Jenks sat down on a tree stump. He held in his hand a small bit of ore worth perhaps £20. Slowly the conjectures already peeped together in his mind during early days on the island came back to him.

The skeleton of an Englishman lying there among the bushes near the well, the Golgotha of the poison filled hollow, the mining tools, both Chinese and European; the plan on the piece of tin—oh, the piece of tin! Mechanically the sailor produced it from the breast pocket of his jersey. At last the mysterious sign "32 divided by 1" revealed its significance. Measure thirty-two feet from the mouth of the tunnel, dig one foot in depth, and you came upon the mother lode of this gold bearing rock. This, then, was the secret of the cave.

The Chinese knew the richness of the deposit and exhibited its treasures by quarrying from the outer side of the hill. But their crass ignorance of modern science led to their undoing. The accumulation of liberated carbonic acid gas in the workings killed them in scores. They probably fought this unseen demon with the tenacity of their race until the place became accursed and banned of all living things. Yet had they dug a little ditch and permitted the invisible terror to flow quietly downward until its potency was dissipated by sea and air they might have mined the whole cliff with impunity.

The unfortunate unknown, J. S.—he of the whitened bones—might have done this thing too. But he only possessed the half knowledge of the working mine and while shunning the plague stricken quarry adopted the more laborious method of making an adit to strike the deposit. He succeeded, to perdition miserably, in the hour when he saw himself a millionaire.

Was this a portent of the fate about to overtake the latest comers? Jenks, of course, stood up. He always stood square on his feet when the volcano within him fired his blood.

"No!" he almost shouted. "I will break the spell. I am sent here by Providence, not to search for gold, but to save a woman's life, and if the devils of China and Malay are in league against me I will beat them!"

The sound of his own voice startled him. What was all this fuss about? With a barrow load of gold he could not buy an assassin's safety for Iris, not to mention himself. The language of a lunatic was inaudible. Were it otherwise the Dyaks would slay him until he revealed the source of his wealth, and then murder him as an effective safeguard against foreign interference.

Iris! Not once since she was hurried ashore in his arms had Jenks so long forgotten her existence. Should he tell her? They were partners in every thing pertaining to the island. Why keep this unworldly intelligence from her?

Yet was he tempted, not ignominiously, but by reason of his love for her. Once years ago, when his arduous professional studies were distracted by a momentary infatuation for a fair face, a woman had proved delectable when tempted by greater wealth than he possessed. For long he was a confirmed misogynist, to his great and lasting gain as a leader of men. But with more capable judgment came a fixed resolution not to marry unless his prospective bride cared only for him and not for his position. To a staff corps officer, even one with a small private income, this was no unattainable ideal. Then he met with the shame and agony of the court marshal. While his soul still quivered under the lash of that terrible downfall Iris came into his life. He knew not what might happen if they were rescued. The time would quickly pass until the old order was resumed, she to go back to her position in society, he to become again a disgraced ex-officer, apparently working out a mere existence before the must or landing plates in a saloon.

Would it not be a sweet defiance of adversity were he able, even under such conditions, to win her love and then disclose to her the potentialities of the island? Perchance he might fall. Though rich as Croesus, he would still be under the social ban meted out to a cashiered officer. She was a girl who could command the gift of coronets. With restoration to her father and home, gratitude to her preserver would assuredly remain; but, alas, love might vanish like a mirage! Then he could not honorably. Half of the stored wealth would be hers to do as she chose with it.

Yes, this was a possible alternative. In case of accident to himself and her ultimate escape he must immediately write full details of his discovery and instruct the document to her, to be opened only after his death or six months after their release.

The idea possessed him so thoroughly that he could brook no delay. He searched for one of the notebooks taken from the dead officers of the Star and scribbled the following letter:

Dear Miss Deane—Whether I am living or dead when you read these lines, you will know that I love you. Could I repeat that a million times in as many varied forms I should find no better phrase to express the dream I have cherished since a happy fate permitted me to snatch your fair death. So I simply say, "I love you." I will continue to love you while life lasts, and it is my dearest hope that in the life beyond the grave I may still be able to voice my love for you.

But worse than I am not destined to be loved by you. Therefore, in the event of my death before you leave the island, I wish to give you instructions how to find a gold mine of great value which is hidden in the rock containing the cave. You remember the sign on the piece of tin which we could not understand. The figure 32 denotes the almost depth of the excavation, and the 1 signifies that one foot below the surface, reaching the face of the rock, there is a rich vein of gold. The hollow on the other side of the cliff became filled with subhydrate gas, and this stopped the operations of the Chinese, who evidently knew of the existence of the mine. This is all the information the experts employed by Sir Arthur Deane will need. The facts are unimpeachable. Assuming that I am alive, we will, of course, be partners in the mine. If I am dead, I wish one-sixth share to be given to my uncle, William Anstruther, Cromwell Place, Northampton, Yorkshire, as a recompense for his kindness in so doing my early life. The remainder is to be yours absolutely.

ROBERT ANSTRUTHER.

He read this remarkable document twice through to make sure that it accurately recorded his sentiments. He even smiled sarcastically at the endowment of the uncle who disinherited him.

Then, satisfied with the perusal, he bore out the two leaves covered by the letter and began to devise a means of protecting it securely while in Iris' possession.

At that moment he looked up and saw her coming toward him across the beach, brightly flushed after her bath, walking like a nymph clothed in tattered garments. Perceiving that he was watching her, she waved her hand and instinctively quickened her pace. Even now, when they were thrown together by the exigencies of each hour, she disliked to be long separated from him.

Instantly the scales fell from his mental vision. What! Distrust Iris! Imagine for one second that riches or poverty, good repute or ill, would affect that loyal heart when its original fond was filled with the love that once in her life comes to every true woman! Perish the thought!

Laughing at his fantastic folly Jenks bore the letter into little pieces. It might have been wiser to throw the sheets into the embers of the fire close at hand, but for the nonce he was overpowered by the great awakening that had come to him.

"Good gracious! Don't gaze at me in that fashion. I don't look like a ghost, do I?" cried Iris, when near enough to note his rapt expression.

"You would not object if I called you a vision?" he inquired quietly, averting his eyes lest they should speak more plainly than his tongue.

"Not if you meant it nicely. But I fear that 'specter' would be a more appropriate word. Just look at my best gown!"

She spread out the front widths of her skirt, and certainly the prospect was lamentable. The dress was so patched and mended, yet so full of fresh rents, that a respectable housemaid would hesitate before using it to clean her trousers.

"Is that really your best dress?" he said.

"Yes. This is my blue serge. The brown cloth did not survive the soaking it received in salt water. After a few days it simply crumbled. The others are muddied or cotton and have been—er—adapted."

"There is plenty of men's clothing," he began.

"Unfortunately there isn't another island," she said severely.

"No. I meant that it might be possible to—er—contrive some sort of rig that will serve all purposes."

"But all my thread is gone. I have barely a needle left."

"In that case we must fall back on our supply of hemp."

"I suppose that might be made to serve," she said. "You are never at a loss for an expedient."

"It will be a poor one, I fear. But you can make up for it by buying some nice gowns at Doucet's or Worth's."

She laughed delightedly. "Perhaps in his joy at my reappearance my dear you said antimony was not very valuable?"

"That is not antimony. It is gold. By chance I have hit upon an extremely rich lode of gold. At the most modest computation it is worth hundreds of thousands of pounds. You and I are quite wealthy people, Miss Deane."

Iris opened her blue eyes very wide at his intelligence. It took her breath away. But her first words betokened her innate sense of fair dealing.

"You and I! Wealthy!" she gasped. "I am so glad for your sake, but tell me, pray, Mr. Jenks, what have I got to do with it?"

"You!" he repeated. "Are we not partners in this island? My squatter's right is by no better title to our land, minerals, wood, game and even such wondrous belongings as ancient lights and fishing privileges."

"I don't see that at all. You find a gold mine and coolly tell me that I am a half owner of it because you dragged me out of the sea, fed me, housed me, saved my life from pirates and generally acted like a devoted nursemaid in charge of a baby. Really, Mr. Jenks—"

"Really, Miss Deane, you will annoy me seriously if you say another word. I absolutely refuse to listen to such an argument."

For some time they stood in silence until the sailor commenced to reproach himself for his rough protest. Perhaps he had hurt her sensitive feelings. What a brute he was to be sure! She was only a child in ordinary affairs, and he ought to have explained things more lucidly and with greater command over his temper. And all this time Iris' face was dimpling with amusement, for she understood him so well that had he threatened to kill her she would have laughed at him.

"Would you mind getting the lamp?" he said softly, surprised to catch her expression of sunny humor.

"Oh, please may I speak?" she inquired. "I don't want to annoy you, but I am simply dying to talk."

He had forgotten his own injunction. "Let us first examine our mine," he said. "If you bring the lamp we can have a good look at it."

Close scrutiny of the work already done merely confirmed the accuracy of his first impression. While Iris held the light he opened up the seam with a few strokes of the pick. Each few inches it broadened into a noteworthy volcanic dike, now yellow in its absolute purity, at times a bluish black when fused with other metals. The additional labor involved caused him to follow up the line of the fault. Suddenly the flame of the lamp began to flicker in a draft. There was an air passage between cave and ledge.

"They came back into the external glare. Iris was now so serious that she forgot to extinguish the little lamp. She stood with outstretched hand.

"There is a lot of money in there," she said.

"Tons of it."

"No need to quarrel about division. There is enough for both of us."

"Quite enough. We can even spare some for our friends."

The hour drew near when Jenks climbed to the Summit rock. He shouldered ax and rifle and set forth. Iris heard him rustling upward through the trees. She set some water to boil for tea and, while bringing a fresh supply of fuel, passed the spot where the torn scraps of paper littered the sand.

She was the soul of honor for a woman, but there was never a woman yet who could take her eyes off a written document which confronted her. She could not help seeing that one small morsel contained her own name. Though mutilated, it had clearly read—

"Dear Miss Deane."

"So it was intended for me!" she cried, throwing down her bundle and dropping to her knees. She secured that particular slip and examined it earnestly. Not for worlds would she pick up all the scraps and endeavor to sort them. Yet they had a fascination for her, and at this closer range she saw another which bore the legend—"I love you!"

Somewhat the two seemed to fit together very nicely.

Yet a third carried the same words—"I love you." They were still quite coherent. She did not want to look any further. She did not even turn over such of the torn pieces as had fluttered to earth face downward.

Opening the front of her bodice, she brought to light a small gold locket containing miniature of her father and mother. Inside this receptacle she carefully placed the three really material portions of the sailor's letter. When Jenks walked down the hill again he heard her singing long before he caught sight of her sedulously tending the fire.

As he came near he perceived the remains of his useless document. He stooped and gathered them up, forthwith throwing them among the glowing logs.

"By the way, what were you writing while I had my bath?" inquired Iris demurely.

"Some information about the mine. On second thoughts, however, I saw it was unnecessary."

"Oh, was that all?"

"Practically all."

"Then some part was impracticable?"

He glanced sharply at her, but she was merely talking at random.

"Well, you see," he explained, "one can do so little without the requisite plant. This sort of ore requires a crushing mill, a smelting furnace, perhaps big tanks filled with cyanide of potassium."

"And of course, although you can do wonders, you cannot provide all those things, can you?"

Jenks deemed this query to be unanswerable.

"They were busy again until night fell. Sitting down for a little while be-

The Great Tonic and Blood Purifier—Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Catarrh.

It is a trite and true saying that the "blood is the life." Now where does the blood come from? Everybody knows, or should know, that it comes from the nutritive elements extracted by the stomach from the food we eat. If the digestive organs do not perform their functions by reason of disease germs, there is no nutrition extracted, and the food might better be thrown in the dump to decay and breed germs in the open air than to remain in the stomach and become a rotten, putrid mass, as it naturally does if there is no digestion. No disease germ can live and find lodgment in a human body that uses the Shoffner's Sure Cure. Price $1.00.

Mayfield, Ky., April 6.—Ernest Jetton, a young farmer was killed Tuesday afternoon while at work building a wire fence on the Jetton farm three miles southeast of Sedalia. He was stretching the wire for the fence with a pair of wire stretchers when the three top wires broke, causing the lever to break also. He was standing with his back to the fence and the lever flew off with tremendous force and struck Jetton on the back of the neck and head, producing almost instant death.

Rules of State Republicans to be Changed

Louisville, Ky., April 6.—Rules and by-laws of Republican committees in Kentucky will be revised within thirty days. This decision was reached at a four hours session of the Republican state central committee held at Republican state headquarters in Louisville. The work of revising the rules is entrusted to Chairman R. P. Ernst and a committee of two others to be named by him.

The object of the revision is to correct many vague points and not so much to change the existing rules as to make them clearer and more distinct. At present they admit of too wide a latitude of interpretation and committees frequently differ over the construction of certain points.

The advisory committee recently appointed by the Jefferson county executive committee was empowered to revise the rules applying to Jefferson county, which rules do not apply to any other county in the state. The advisory committee's report will be submitted to the city and county executive committee, and after that committee takes action, it will be submitted for approval to the state central committee which will be called together in thirty days to receive both reports. The object of revision of the Jefferson county rules is for the same reason that the state rules are to be revised. In the new rules provision will be made to cover every possible emergency.

A Dandy for Burns.
Dr. Bergin, Pains, Ill., writes: "I have used Hallard's Snow Liniment; always recommended it to my friends as I am confident there is no better made. It is a dandy for burns. Those who live on farms are especially liable to many accidental cuts, burns, bruises, which heal rapidly when Hallard's Snow Liniment is applied. It should always be kept in the house for cases of emergency." 25c, 50c, $1 bottle.
